Beaver

Trapping

During the first quarter of the year 1947 the below mentioned pupils, under the guidance of Daniel Sailors (Indian of Moose Factory), received instruction in Indian methods of taking beaver and winter wood life generally. This took place over a trap-line granted to the pupils of the School by the General Supervisor, Fur Developments, I.D. The boys left the school (three each week) Friday morning and returned Sunday noon. While absent from the school they were under the direct supervision of their instructor. Food and bedding was supplied by the school and the other equipment by the local Indian Office. Each boy experienced ten days in the bush during the quarter.

Trapping

During the first quarter of the year 1947 the below mentioned pupils, under the guidance of Daniel Seilers (Indian of Moose Factory), received instruction in Indian methods of taking beaver and winter wood life generally. This took place over a trap-line granted to the pupils of the School by the General Supervisor, Fur Developments, I.D. The boys left the school (three each week) Friday morning and returned Sunday noon. While absent from the school they were under the direct supervision of their instructor. Food and bedding was supplied by the school and the other equipment by the local Indian Office. Each boy experienced ten days in the bush during the quarter.
