CHIEF SHINGWAUK, "THE PINE"
(1773 - 1854)

Also known as Shingwaukonce, or "LITTLE PINE", William McMurray Shingwauk, Chief of the Garden River Ojibway, rose to prominence fighting alongside Isaac Brock and Chief Tecumseh in the 1812-1814 war. Between 1827 and 1854 he developed a new native rights and self-determination strategy which envisaged "Teaching Wigwams" throughout Anishnabek lands to provide European style education. His "Teaching Wigwam" vision was carried on by his sons, Augustin (1800-1890), Buhkwujjenene (1811-1900), John Askin (1836-1919), and George Menissino (1839-1923).

CHIEF AUGUSTIN SHINGWAUK
(1800 - 1890)

The son of Chief Shingwauk, Augustin carried on the work to fulfil the Shingwauk vision. In 1871 he travelled with Wilson to Southern Ontario raising funds for the establishment of an Industrial School at Garden River. Wilson published Augustin's statement of his views and experiences as "Little Pine's Journal" herein reprinted.

REV. EDWARD FRANCIS WILSON
(1844 - 1915)

Along with Augustin Shingwauk and Buhkwujjenene, E. F. Wilson was co-founder of the Shingwauk and Wawanosh Industrial Schools. He was also known as "PUHGUKAHBUN" (Clear day light) and "SAHYAHQUADUNG" (the proclaimer) by the Ojibway. Wilson was principal of Shingwauk School from 1873-1893, and also built schools at Batchewana, Nipigon, Elkhorn (Manitoba), and Medicine Hat (Alberta).

ST. JOHN'S MISSION, GARDEN RIVER, 1870

Rev. James and Mrs. Chance were in charge of St. John's Mission from 1854 to 1871. The Church, the Parsonage, and the little log School House (the second Shingwauk "Teaching Wigwam") are shown as Wilson first saw them in 1870.

BISHOP FREDRICK DAWSON
FAUQUIERE
(1817 - 1882)

The first Bishop of the Missionary Diocese of Algoma, consecrated on October 1873, Bishop Fauquiere was an avid supporter of Augustin, Buhkujjenene, Wilson and the "Teaching Wigwams". His Diocese stretched for more than 700 miles from Thunder Bay to the Muskokas.

SHINGWAUK HOME IN THE 1880'S

THE SHINGWAUK HOME, 1892

By Wilson's resignation in 1892, the Shingwauk was a largely self-sufficient residential industrial educational complex. From the St. Mary's River, left to right: the Hospital (with the adjoining Women's Wing), the Main Building (1874), the Bishop Fauquiere Memorial chapel (1883), the Band Stand, the new Classroom Building, and the Industrial Building. Not visible are the barns, cemetery, the farm man's house, the factory, and the factory foreman's house.

These tapestries 8 ft. X 8 ft., painted by E. F. Wilson, were displayed on wagons and stages as Wilson, the Chiefs, and Indian students travelled to various locations to raise funds for the Shingwauk and sister Schools.

Unfortunately, the originals are in need of restoration and cannot be displayed. They are preserved in acid free paper and stored in tubes at the Heritage Centre, Anglican Diocese. It is hoped that in the future funds will be raised to restore and hang them again for all to see.

"Shingwauk's Vision: The Teaching Wigwam"
by Jesse Agawa

The painting by Jesse Agawa shows Chief Shingwauk envisaging the "Teaching Wigwam" before his journey to York (Toronto) in 1832 where he petitioned the Governor of Canada for teachers for his people. The Chief and the medicine lodge or wigwam are enclosed in a circle, a turtle symbolic of the Island Continent - North America. He holds his medicine bag and makes an offering of tobacco in hopes that his vision will be realized. The eagles, like guardians, see and protect the vision. The peace pipe and the wisdom of the thunderbird suggest the foundations and intentions of his vision. The children stand on firm ground between the pines and hold the books that will assist in the way forward.

Limited edition signed prints with an explanatory commemorative booklet are available at the bookstore, by donation.

In 1872, the Rev. Wilson wanted to raise funds for the mission so he took Chief Buhkwujjenene on a trip to England. The day after they landed this notice appeared in the Glasgow Herald: "An interesting stranger has arrived in this country. His name is Chief Buhkwujjenene which signifies a man of the wilds. He is dressed in full costume on the Chippewa Tribes to which he belongs-viz-skins, feathers, etc. It is understood that this chief has been brought to England so that he may be instructed in Christian truth fitting him to return as a Native teacher and preacher among his tribe in the backwoods of America."

My grandfather writes:

"The chief was received in my father's house and treated with every show of respect. It was strange to see him seated in his blanket coat in an easy chair under the gas lights in the drawing room but he behaved with perfect ease and politeness and everyone was charmed with him. We used to drive about London on the top of an omnibus, and he addressed a great many meetings, speaking in his own tongue, while I interpreted for him."

There was a long succession of meetings and garden parties and $740 (in English pounds) in all was collected. The chief also had an interview with King Edward, who was at that time Prince of Wales. The prince was most cordial and presented him with a medal.

The founding and financing of the Indian homes involved much hard work and anxiety and Wilson's health necessitated his relinquishing the work. His doctors advised him to seek a complete change of scene and rest.
